69-70 Becomes A Year For Voices To Be Heard As A Generation Speaks

METAL TEETH scraping against cement and broken glass clinking together are sounds of the campus clean-up as conscientious students remove litter strewn over the grounds by non-caring classmates.

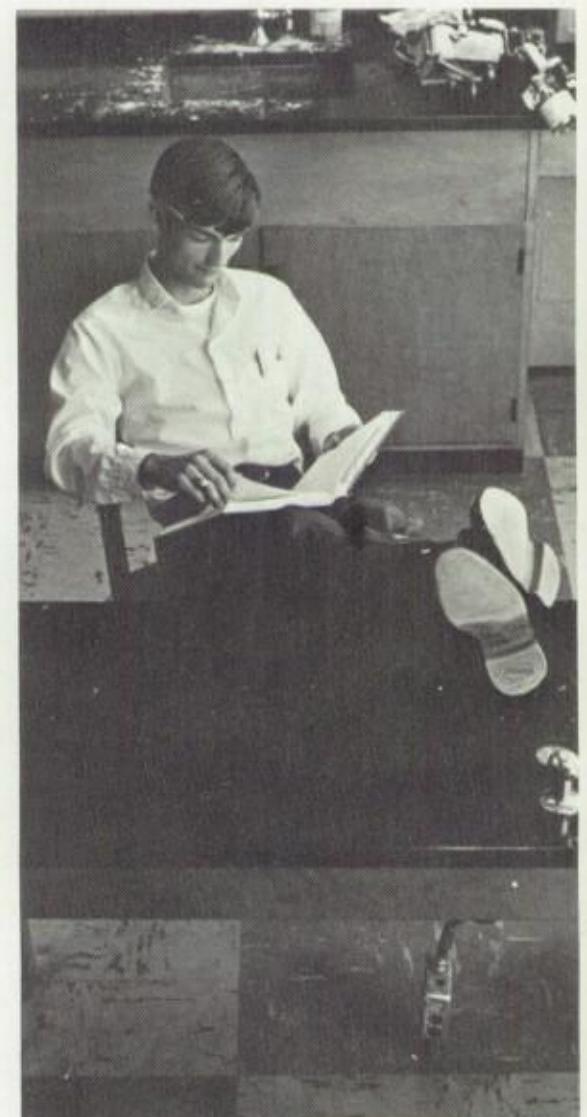

Having become acutely sensitive to the world encompassing them and having developed the ability to think in a deeper perspective than they could during childhood, adolescents began, during their high school years, a crystallization of their personal ideas about all phases of life. Insignificant as well as major impressions of environment provoked thought about the world, community, school, human nature, and self. A natural result of this increase in thinking was students' augmented desire to express to others their attitudes, conceptions, and ideas. Consequently, this generation sought ways to speak about the feelings and thoughts it experienced both as a unit and as individuals. Daily, Hickory High students were continually speaking directly, indirectly, unconsciously, and intentionally about their ideas.

HONOR: the joy that comes from being set apart from others is finalized in the initiation ceremony of Quill and Scroll, who recognizes students that have shown outstanding achievement for their staffs.

USHERING in Hickory's newest sport as sophomores, wrestling co-captains John Brock and SOLITUDE enables Sidney Keener to review "rough spots" and to ease pre-exam qualms.

Larry Winters as seniors lead a greatly improved "mat" team through continued persistence.

A WAX-FILLED RING on a girl's hand, sometimes a sight to last for a year, for a month, for a week, or for only a day, becomes a common appearance and marks a special bond between two people.

Kaleidoscope of Ideas Reflected Through Actions

As diversified as the personalities at Hickory High, the actions of individual students, well-meaning and harmful, planned and spontaneous, spoke about their personal ideals and feelings. While exertion to physical limits of endurance expressed athletes' idea that development of body and continuation of the honor of winning were important, careless discarding of cigarette butts and defacing school property conveyed the lack of respect some students felt for the school. Reflected in intensive studying was the importance various teenagers placed on learning, whereas lackadaisical practices in schoolwork stated disinterest in scholastic knowledge on the part of others. A white walk-out over "Dixie" illustrated strong disapproval over a song policy. Conforming to fads, joining clubs, and going steady, all exhibited adolescents' desire to "belong." Intentional shoves in crowded halls expressed hostilities; simultaneously, an amiable smile mirrored consideration for others. Actions, no matter how important or trivial they might have seemed, were everyday expressions of the thoughts and ideas of students.

PROVOCATIVE editorials and reader write-ins indicate that student apathy is on the decline.

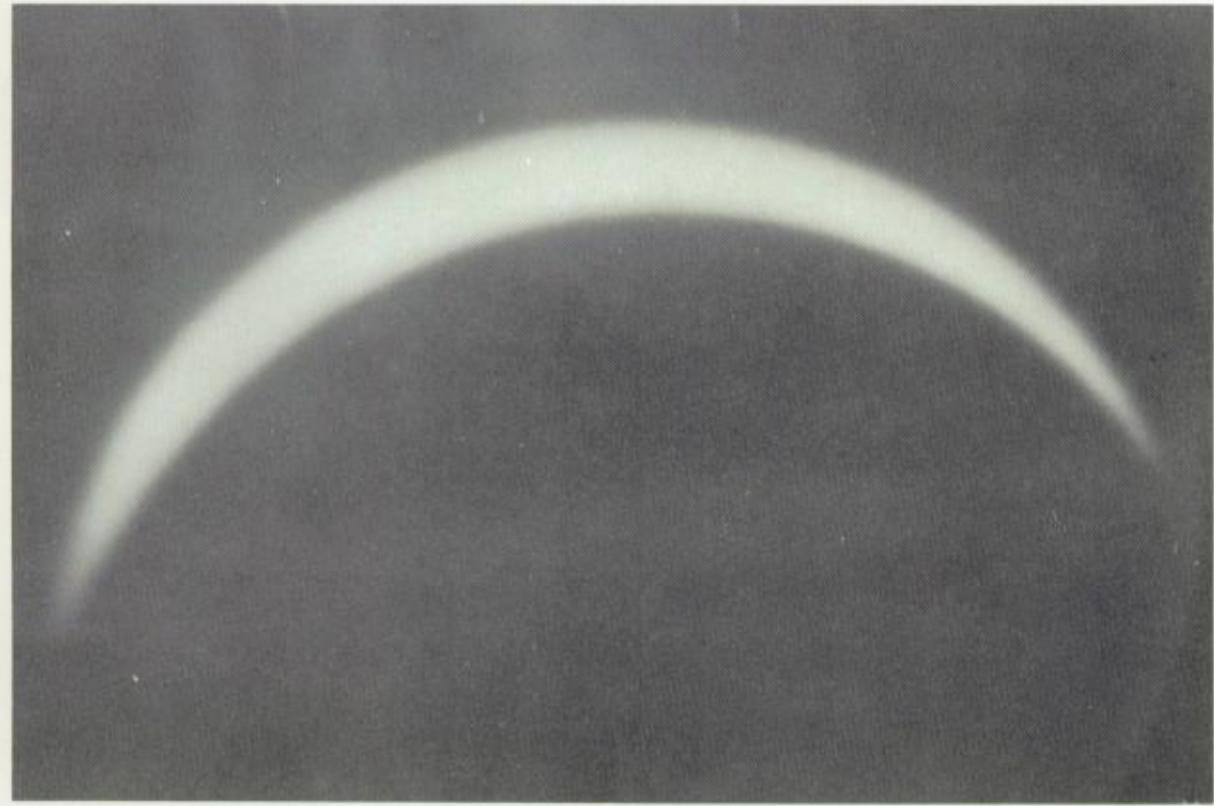

PRESIDENT KENNEDY'S "New Frontier" is realized when the Apollo Eleven astronauts embark on their historic voyage to the moon, initiating a challenge for youth to surpass these achievements.

Elections, Essays, Editorials — Outlets For Opinions

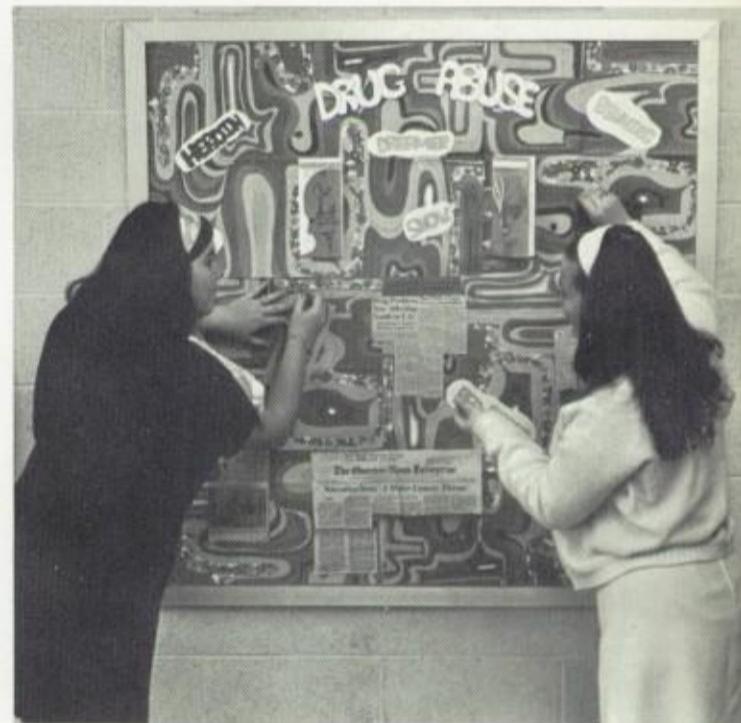

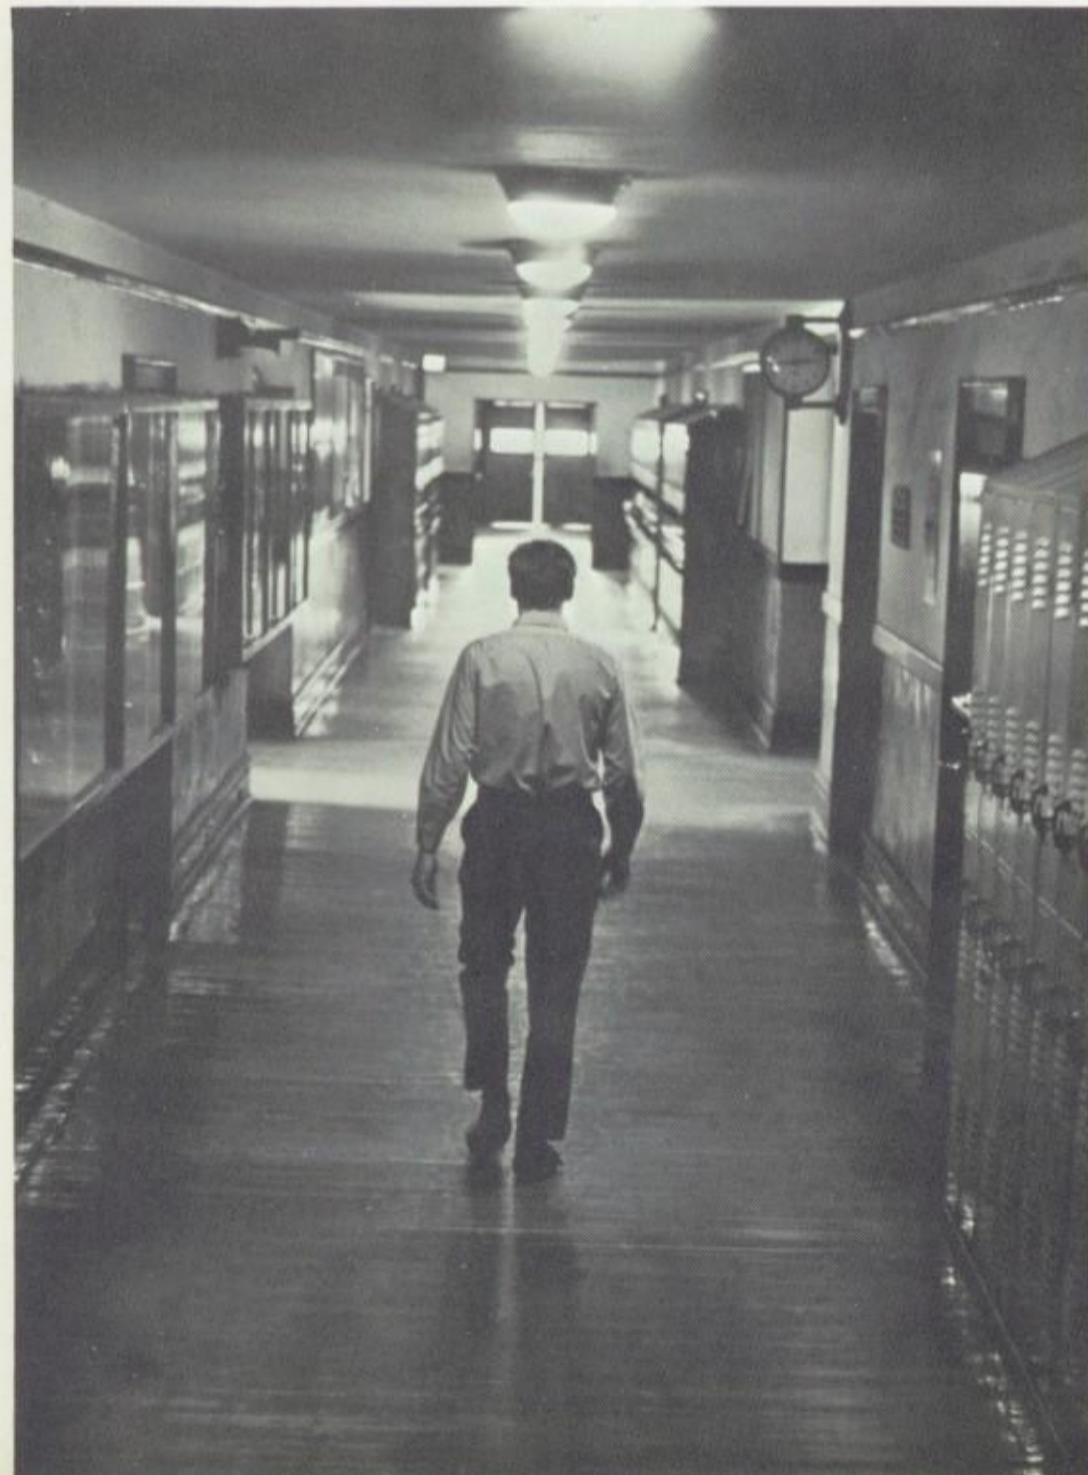

Increasingly cognizant of everything occurring in the world, adolescents scrutinized conditions, situations, and attitudes surrounding them and utilized actions to voice opinions about what they witnessed. Writing editorials was an outlet for ideas concerning diminishing senior privileges, helping race relations, and electing a Student Council president. Observing that they had been walked on for too many years, some students made protests about what they considered unfair treatment. Worn halls and crowded classrooms invoked student complaints about attending an aged institution, whereas these same sites inspired others to boast of the well-filled trophy cases and tradition of excellence of a well-established school. Recognizing varied character traits in classmates, students expressed the qualities they considered most important by their votes in school elections. Having the opportunity to watch live man's first landing on the moon, teenagers showed their excitement and approval by watching the venture into the early morning hours. Careful examination of world events prompted development of personal views on Viet Nam, religious and racial conflicts, and poverty and crime which were verbalized in discussions and essays. Perceiving more about their environment, students were stimulated to think and to speak about their thoughts.

ECLIPSE OF THE SUN, now a sight unseen until the year 2017, promotes further scientific investigation of such phenomena as its rarity and awe probes the curious mind of the young student.

WORN FLOORS and dented lockers of trophy-lined corridors — halls of H.H.S. are seen in different lights by students selecting their own interpretation of the school which they inhabit for years.

A PSYCHEDELIC bulletin board helps in explanation of drug hallucinations and problems.

Service Projects Convey Concern Regarding Poverty, Peace, Race Relations

Most significant of all ideas spoken by this generation were those concerning what it thought needs to be done for mankind. Visits to retarded children, tutoring for underprivileged children, ringing the Salvation Army bell at Christmas — these and other service projects spoke of the need students felt for helping the unfortunate. Recognizing the necessity of research in man's future existence, some teenagers prepared for future work in science, and in so doing pronounced their opinion that humanity should continue broadening its understanding of unknown concepts. Peaceful attempts to iron out problems in race relations through the Jr. Human Relations Council voiced students' attitude that prejudice ought to be dissolved and understanding built. Additionally, participation in the American Field Service spoke about the universal need adolescents saw for better communication between all types of people from every race, religion, and nationality. This generation has thought for itself and has spoken, but it will not stop speaking now. This generation will continue to speak its ideas for as long as it retains its ability to think.

PUZZLEMENT over phonetics and simple math conceptions slowly dissolves for children because Thomas Penn, Katrina Peed, and Elaine Rudisill are willing to give an hour of their time for tutoring.

SATIRICAL comedy skits and dialogues, written and produced by the Junior Human Relations Council, evolve into "Laugh Out '69" which attempts to eradicate racial tensions through humor.

SURPRISES, games, food, and warm smiles characterize a Sub-Jr. party for needy children.

FUDGE, BROWNIES, and cocoanut cookies are packaged and addressed in an assembly line by Judy Frye, Nancy Lewis, and Ann Greene for delivery as Christmas presents to U.S. soldiers in Viet Nam.

Log Seniors Select Faculty's Outstanding Six

All teachers devote many hours to the education of young people, and all faculty members should be respected for the efforts they put into their work. Therefore, the LOG Staff wishes to recognize six teachers for their special contributions to the school. For time spent in coaching teams, in tutoring "lost" students, in advising publications, in supervising the "iron monster", and in being dedicated through long years of service, these six merit recognition.

MRS. MARY HASSEL... Computer operator... Data Processing Teacher... Lively.

MISS ELIZABETH SMYRE... Math...

A SENIOR HOMEROOM becomes one of the final collages of personalities for third year classmen as their high school years dwindle into the past and life's challenge is only a step into the future.

Excelling in Scholastics, Ushering in 4-A Competition as Varsity Players — '70 Seniors Honored

We, the members of the LOG Staff, dedicate the 1970 HICKORY LOG to you, the senior class. You have excelled in scholastics, with five merit finalists, three nominees for armed forces academies, a state winner who represented North Carolina in a national contest, and many scholarship recipients. Even though you began your varsity sports in the more competitive 4-A division, you have produced players prominent in both the conference and state. Others of you were outstanding because you thought of ways to improve student involvement in both school and community. But the ideas could not have been carried out without those of you who stood behind them and made them work. At the same time however, you overlooked other situations and opportunities which might have benefitted from your interest. Nevertheless, because your accomplishments were widespread and because you wanted to accomplish, it is especially to the members of the senior class who have given something of themselves to the school, who have accepted challenge, who have challenged themselves and others to excel, and who have expressed their ideas, that we dedicate this book, a permanent reminder of your high school life.

RED Tornadoes gain added morale from Seniors who sign up to support their team.

FOOTBALL has its good and bad moments in a "lean" year, but Hickory places two players on the N.C. State Shrine Bowl team, and coach Frank Barger brings the state its first victory in seven years.

Shrine Victory, "Dixie" Controversy And Basketball Success Highlight Year

DISSENT OVER "DIXIE" provoked three days of discussion and a walkout over the playing of the song. The school board refused to decide on the matter, but hot tempers cooled at the holiday break.

Success on the hardcourt establishes Hickory High as a basketball as well as a football power.

COLD DRINK cups sometimes find their way onto the grass as graduation 1970 approaches.

Loud pros and cons of individuals' opinions and the magnetic unity afforded by a common cause were the antithetical characteristics of a student body experiencing mixed and confused emotions resulting from yesterday and today. With the appearance of confederate flags, the search for an objective solution began as blacks and whites firmly debated the issue of "Dixie," the traditional pep song. Yet as the year progressed, a feeling of togetherness became analogous to both races as students. When the football season arrived, Coach Frank Barger served as coach for the winning team in the annual Shrine Bowl Game. As a tribute to him, the Student Council set aside a week as "Barger Week." Moving away from conventionalism, girls at Hickory High appeared in pant suits, khakis, and jeans as unusually cold weather resulted in permission to wear slacks to class. For those with hurried schedules or early rides, the school initiated a program of serving breakfast. Within the school year, these new activities, along with old ones, presented a meaningful co-existence in the life of a student.

PERPETUAL PEP figures, Red Tornado cheerleaders link the athlete and spectator into a single unit with song chants, cheers, and a one hundred per cent support for the school's major fall activity.

Kaleidoscope of Color Envelops Fall Activity

Innovations through new personalities plus overtones of the preceding two years consolidated in embarking upon a unique school term. With reflections of summer still fresh in their minds, students returned to duties of filling out registration cards, or in the case of sophomores, searching for the right homeroom. But soon all were settled and the captivating atmosphere of a united body overtook the school through magazine sales. Spectrums of color and the appearance of sweaters soon changed the formerly warm scene into that of autumn. Characteristically, pep rallies gave each individual student the right to voice his own school spirit. Bonfires, silhouetted against a dark sky, voiced vibrant cheers. Camouflaged by student activities as well as nature, fall was only the beginning of another year of student life for Hickory High Students.

Homecoming

Napkin-raided grocers and noisy confusion: the scavenger hunt for napkins, flatbeds, and chickenwire was on as the 1969 Homecoming was launched. Following the theme of "Storybook Victory," the parade featured over a hundred entries depicting a fantasyland ranging from fairytales to Mother Goose. The school hosted a pancake supper and a bonfire, signifying the beginning of the end for the traditional event. But sleepless nights seemed worth it when at the football game, the band was awarded first place in float competition, and Miss Carolyn Weaver was crowned Homecoming Queen. To end the first Homecoming for some and the last for others was a special dance featuring the Marlboros.

MARSEILLE has many picturesque scenes around its location on the Mediterranean Sea, but one of the prettiest inland sights that attracts A.F.S.er Corinne Bolick is their museum of natural history.

Corinne Bolick Resides in France Under American Field Service Program

ONE OF the common beverages of France is wine, enjoyed at meals and as a refreshment.

Towering minarets and the Eiffel Tower — the American Field Service engaged the help of two students in building personal understanding. Entering into the home of Dr. and Mrs. Ira Bell, Haluk Mimaroglu instilled the atmosphere of his native land, Turkey. Involving himself in the school as well as the community, he expressed his opinions through the student council and held down a part-time job. Through his academic interests he ascertained his plans for a future career in science. Exchanging a textbook for the real thing, Corinne Bolick discovered the people as the real substance of France. Chosen first from her school and then from the whole country, Corinne was selected for the coveted honor of representing the U.S. abroad. Her exchange family, Dr. and Mrs. Samuel Miara of Marseilles, introduced her to the surroundings of Paris, the Riviera, historical museums, ancient chateaux, and Roman ruins. From a summer in a foreign land, she learned not only of the history and traditions, but also of the common bond of human nature between the United States and France. Through the efforts of the A.F.S. program, both students found a new way of life which was different but somehow common to their own.

REMOVED from her American background, Corinne adjusts to her family in a foreign land.

French Club Links Hickory and Toulouse With an Intercontinental Exchange

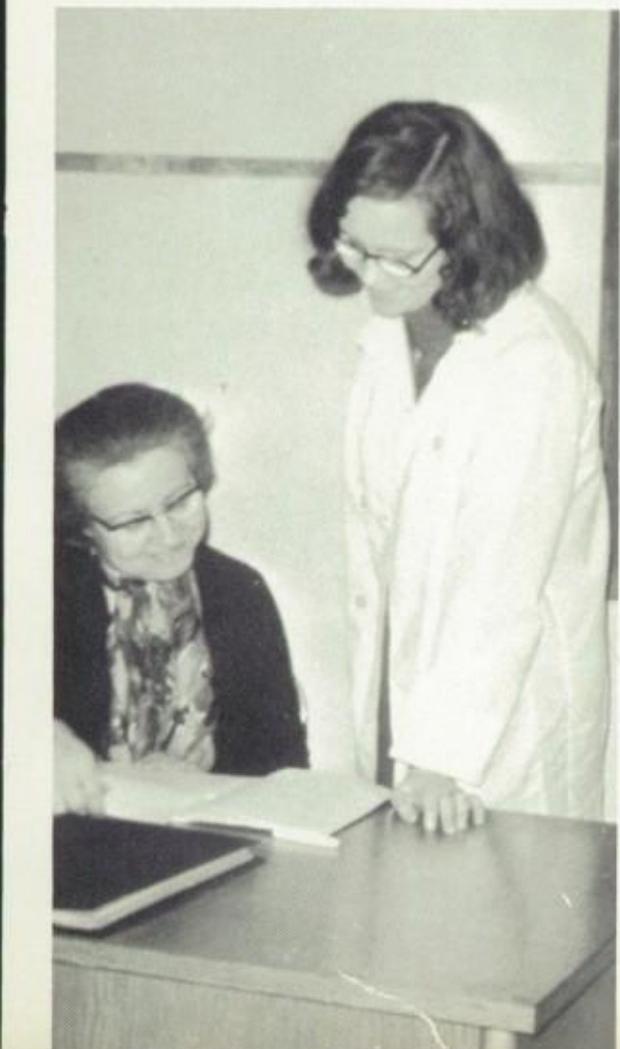

FINAL weeks become days as Barbara Terrell spends her last afternoon home packing.

FINDING home still the best place for study, Barbara gets help from her French brother.

REVIEWING material with her French teacher, Barbara hopes to enrich her vocabulary.

Encountering southern dialect or practicing French intonation produced amusing confusion and an exchange between two countries. In conjunction with the French Club's sister school in Toulouse, Hickory High's Barbara Terrell and Lorraine Jung of Toulouse traded customs and countries for the year. Aided by her host family, that of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Lane, Lorraine became acquainted with American home life. With the beginning of classes, the presence of school spirit proved contagious as she took part in cheerleading, Homecoming, and clubs. Because of these activities, former language problems gave way to mutual interests. Friends came fast, and Lorraine combined her old culture with her new one. Trading football for soccer and becoming accustomed to beginning school in October, Barbara Terrell gained insight by her visit to France. Accompanied by her host family, that of Monsieur and Madame Jean LaMotte, Barbara found that skiing in the Alps and eating at sidewalk cafes were examples of the intrinsic nature of France. Living in countries of different attitudes and cultures, both girls learned more about the essence of a people.

ALTHOUGH sidewalk cafes are entirely French in origin and design, the food served there may be as American as Coke, as Barbara and her sister discover during a trip to downtown Toulouse, France.

New Year Holidays, Snow Bound Sessions, Dances, Semester Examinations

ALL THE cramming, late hours, and long term preparation are brought to light on three successive January days as teachers summarize a half-year's work into a neat little bundle: the semester exam.

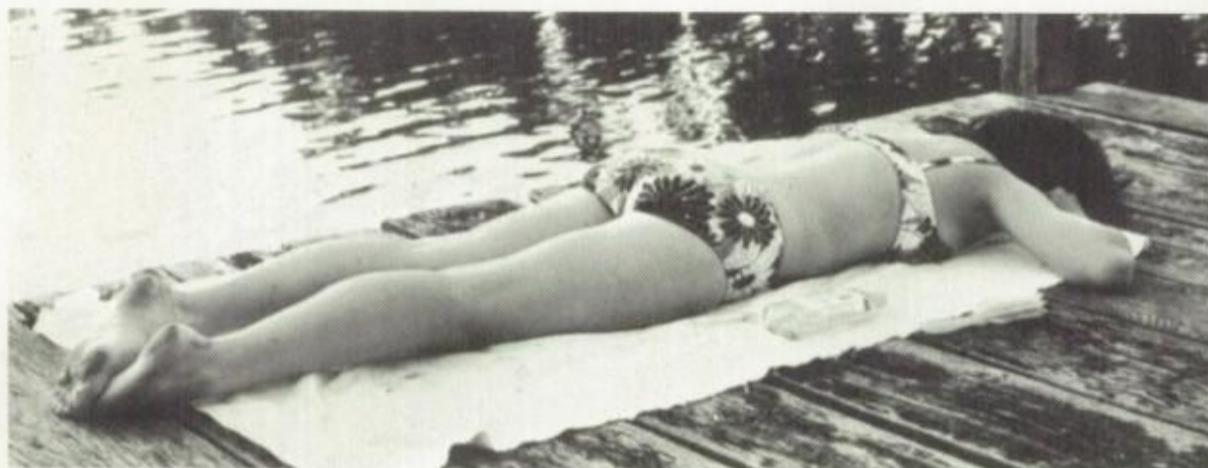

GRAPPLING with his opponent, John Brock participates in a relatively new campus sport.

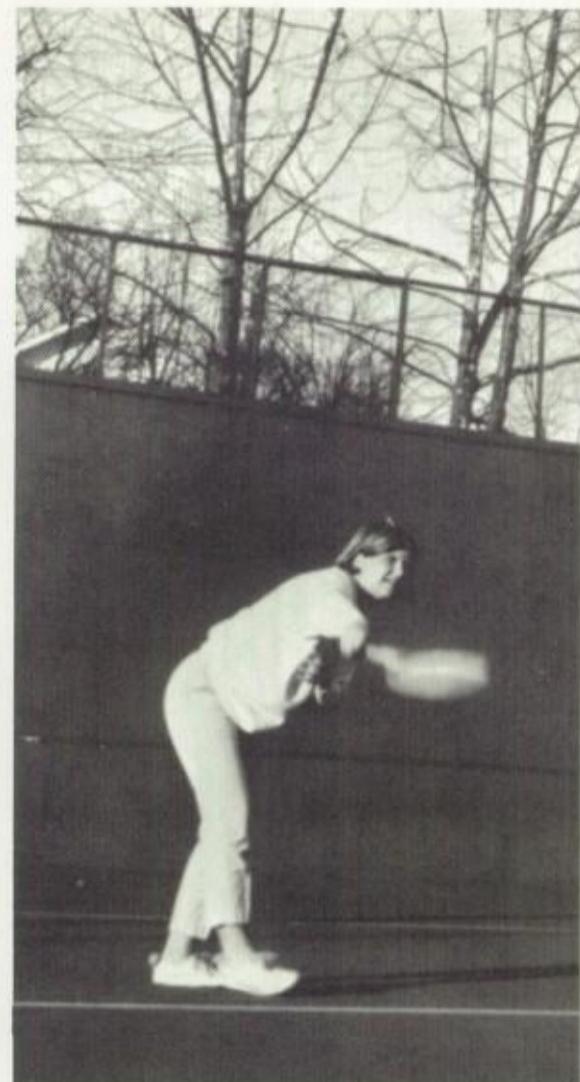

Sub-freezing degrees... slick entries and exits... unexpected snowballs... a very uncommon wintry season opened a new chapter in the seasonal episode. Masquerading behind morning sunshine and clear skies, winter was accompanied by semester exams and New Year's resolutions. Despite a cloak of white and of chilling humidity, the basketball games, entertainment, and Christmas time activities seemed to advocate and circulate personal warmth and unity among the student body. Another portrait of winter was painted as girls were permitted to wear slacks to classes in below freezing weather. Above and below normality, winter earned its own distinction.

IF ONE EVER cares to venture to one of the many lakeside docks which dot rural Hickory, he may catch a glimpse of a calm body of water, a houseboat, but better still, a young sunbather in action.

ALTHOUGH the weather is still a bit cold Barbara Keller tries out her new tennis racket.

Warm Temperatures Become Deterrent to Classroom Concentration, Study

WARM climates bring no socks, sandals, and in this case, a mutual and lasting relationship.

Distinct red lines tracing the route to a favorite beach, a pair of clasped hands, or merely an open window: new sights and sounds silently made their entrance, and students became caught up in the whirlwind of spring's busy schedule. For some it was an omen that the serious business of taking college boards was near at hand. To others it accentuated the excitement brought on by the thought of participating in their first Junior-Senior prom. Still some minds were preoccupied and perhaps a little relieved by the idea that Senior Week and graduation were not just anticipated hopes, but now an actual reality and college and work years were very near at hand. For everyone, whether in a group or individual sense, the spring season meant something entirely different, but in many ways the interests were of common sources. As a result of the Easter holidays, road maps, bare feet, new swimsuits, and empty bottles of suntan lotion made the scene. But still, along with sunburns, upcoming events, and serious plans, some of the pictures that spring painted were more familiar and more personal. No matter how full of surprises spring was, it still meant the birth of leaves, flowers, and new relationships.

OVERWHELMED by the new season, a bored Bruce Mecimore succumbs to daydreams.

APPEALING TO THEIR sense of tidiness, spring beckons the science teachers to rid their rooms of unwanted materials, all of which are transported to a less obstructive but more visible position.

CONVERTIBLE TOPS are lowered as students take advantage of balmy afternoons in May. Thoughts turn toward the Carolina coastline while books quickly become lost in lockers and classrooms.

DURING spring showers, some may find their shoes a bit damp if they step too carelessly.

Humor, talent, and artists' hands converted a dark auditorium into a sudden burst of beauty and unveiled the masterpiece of the Quill and Scroll's efforts—the annual Beauty Pageant. A pavement was laid for the entrance of seventy-five girls to represent clubs, staffs, and classes through the "Hall of Elegance." Fright in facing judges on a seemingly larger than usual stage was hidden beneath the facade of strained smiles under hot lights. While entrants exchanged questioning and eager glances behind the curtain, the audience enjoyed interim entertainment. Music, supplied by the Folk Music Club, the popular Royal Jacks, and the Sounds of Freedom, exemplified student participation in the project. Classical and modern dance added another touch to the varied scope of entertainment. As the decisive minutes slowly passed, nerves tensed still more behind the stage. All anxiety was quieted as the judges delivered the answer to the emcees, and the honor of Miss Hickory High was bestowed upon Miss JoJo Smith.

Talent Show

Wildly fashing lights of psychedelic colors, the classics of contemporary artists, and the presentation of a new "beauty queen" captured the moods of Talent Show '69. Students transformed into entertainers in the traditional, classical, modern, and popular fields. As emcees, Arthur Drumheller and Chuck Helms fulfilled their duties by filling in between acts with amusing anecdotes. Weeks of work by the Student Council were realized when the prizes were awarded to traditional singer Jill Phillips, Vietnamese student Jackie Ly for a classical piano selection, a modern singing group, and a tie between two popular groups. With trophies awarded and recognition acquired, the only materialistic remains were crumpled programs.

Sheiks and Princesses Dance to "Arabian Nights" Atmosphere at Armory

Junior-Senior

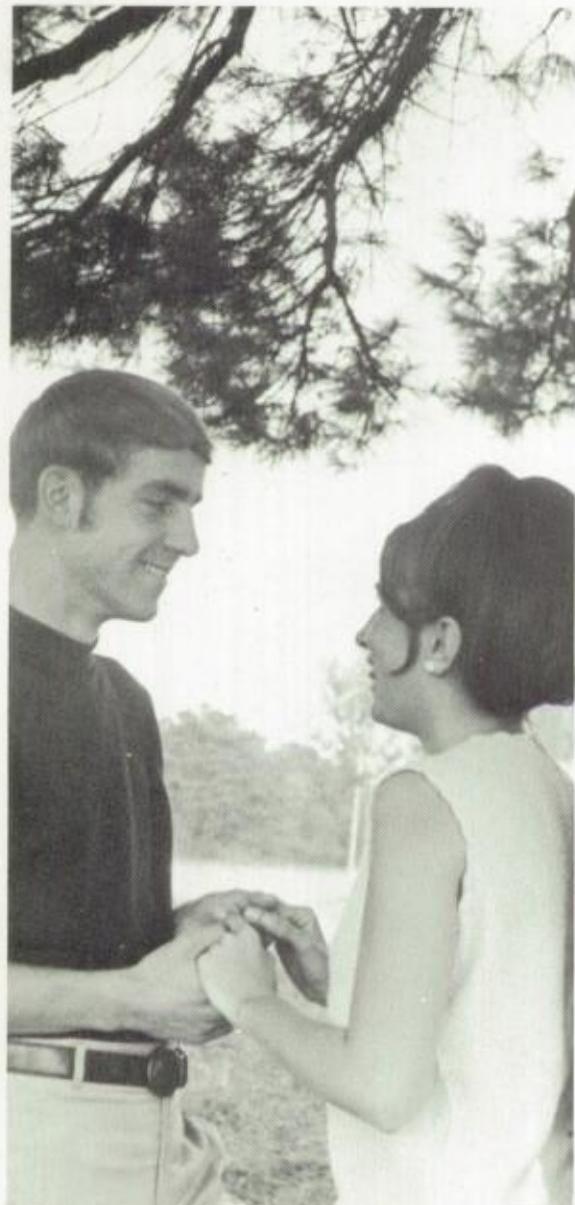

Desert Sheiks and discreet Ladies — the sights of the 1969 Junior-Senior Prom depicted the theme of "Arabian Nights," and the students of Hickory High School became temporarily characteristic of a Middle-Eastern scene. This exotic atmosphere was created by hard-working campaigns of preparation by the Junior Class and fulfilled by those attending the event. The never-ending search for the perfect formal or tuxedo and that ever important choice of corsage were common but necessary trials. Caravans to swank restaurants became commonplace procedure for pre-prom entertainment. Although the situation was of a more romantic atmosphere, students soon disregarded the legendary sagas of Arabia and neglected the hours of grooming preparation. Attempting to bridge the generation gap, the faculty even joined in the motions, dancing to the music provided by the featured Four Winds and the musical combo, the Originals. Finally the anticipated moment arrived: the crowning of the prom king and queen. Voting resulted in the election of Bert Showfety and Kay Eisenhower to the royal position. Post-midnight parties rounded out the regal event, leaving a worn out crew ready for a good night's rest into late morning hours.

PROVING THAT they are still young at heart, Mr. Miller and Mrs. Klassett join the crowd.

LAST minute details of the upcoming event are agreed on by Karen Butler and Robert Bryan.

ANXIOUSLY awaiting her "Sheik for the night," Karen makes some final preparations.

Determination, drive, and devotion resulted in educational and personal achievement for twelve students selected to represent their class. Fusing into a magnitude of talents, attitudes, and interests, they helped to form the new generation dominant at Hickory High School. Three Special Days

Long hair, no socks, mini-skirts, and lovebeads—the nonconformists and the silent objectors became a unit as three special days terminated the school year. Common interest in the field of academics, sports, and extracurricular activities, in the anxiety of awaiting the school annual, and in donning cooler attire for the warm spring days blockaded any outside disagreements in opinions of individuals. As the nonconformists expressed themselves, so the faculty expressed themselves on Awards Day. With the student body assembled at P. E. Monroe Auditorium, awards were distributed in the field of sports and for scholastic achievement in foreign languages, mathematics, sciences, history, and art. Special awards were presented in music, commercial arts, and to club members. Though each moment of recognition became a past memory of pride for many, the final and most important award was the presentation of Boy and Girl of the Year, Seniors Gary Stafford and Sharon Houston. Memories like these were compiled into a materialistic souvenir, the LOG. Its theme of "All-American Awareness" linked the school and the community. Spring drifted along into its season and brought its warm temperatures and the last day of school. To celebrate the already eventful day, students enjoyed a Bermuda Day, sponsored by the Radio-T.V. Staff. For only a quarter, one could exchange the proper attire for a school day for bermuda shorts. Under no more pressures of homework and with final exams behind, the only thoughts were aimed toward beaches, suntans, no shoes, and sleeping till noon.

Graduation

Crowded corridors of memory filled minds of seniors as they filed by, to receive the result of twelve years transposed upon a piece of paper. Memories of victory's joy and defeat's despair the frightened anticipation of semester exams, the jammed hallways and greetings of classmates, the fresh aliveness of the first spring holiday, the atmosphere of the Junior-Senior, the school oneness at pep rallies, the rise of the mini-skirts, the tragedy of the Vietnam, the complications of racial differences, and the success of Apollo mingled with future hopes found amid this unification of personalities. With a thundering cloud-burst, the members of this unique class passed the reviewing stands of a former life and embarked upon a journey into a brave, new, unconquered world.

Administration Questions Problems of Student Demands and Unrest

School Board and Administration

Confronted with the task of maintaining the school as a smoothly operating unit, the School Board and Administration buckled down to another year's work. The Board of seven members fulfilled its annual duties, such as planning the dates of the school year and administering funds to school projects. The Board also adopted a totally different system regarding the requirements for high school graduation. Other functions included the preserving of suitable school standards in compliance with the requirements of the Southern Association and completing plans for the future high school. Meeting on the first Tuesday of each month, the Board made vital decisions concerning such matters as teachers' pay, the legitimacy of dismissals of expelled students, and demands of students. This organization served as a vital link in the chain that connects students with an essential education.

UP-TO-DATE BOOKS and teaching aids, so essential to the learning process and a major concern of educators today, are inspected by the Board of Education at a meeting of the Educational Committee.

DISCUSSING PRESSING educational problems, Joseph Wishon, Superintendent of Hickory City Schools, and Thomas Shores, Chairman of the Hickory School Board, weigh various school issues.

SCHOOL BOARD — Seated: Mr. E. M. Fennell, Dr. Joseph H. Wishon, Mr. Thomas H. Shores, Mrs. J. E. Barringer. Standing: Mr. Taft Broome, Mr. Gene Smith, Dr. W. E. Leonard, Mr. Samuel Dula, Mr. Harold Hewat, Dr.

Alvin Hooks, Mr. William Cauble, Jr., Mr. David Thrift, Mr. Young M. Smith.

Principal Leads, Counsels and Mediates As He Weighs School Problems

Principal

Facing many situations with responsibility and supplying leadership for Hickory High's faculty and students was Principal B. E. Miller. In the role of Principal of the School, Mr. Miller performed a variety of different jobs. His many tasks consisted of counseling pupils on studies and behavior, and interpreting policies initiated by the School Board and administration. During the controversy, caused by the song "Dixie," Mr. Miller held class discussions to weigh the pros and cons of the situation. After holding these discussions and absorbing advice lent him through the Jr. Human Relations Council and letters from individual students, he brought a sensible compromise to Hickory High's Student body. In these capacities the Principal worked for a unity of both the students and the teachers. Over the last few years, Mr. B. E. Miller has invoked his authority and maintained order in several predicaments which were causing turmoil within the school. While instilling school pride and loyalty into each student attending Hickory High School.

Shorthand, Bookkeeping, Typing Constantly Utilized by Office Staff

Office Staff

Patience and understanding in combination with knowledge gained from previous experience were the qualities which enabled the competent office staff of Hickory High to guide the events of the school and the students through many hectic days. Amid the explosion of clicking typewriters and ringing telephones, secretaries and student aids continued with their daily routines of transcribing school correspondence, announcing messages, directing visitors, and attending to the pink slips administered to tardy students with both efficiency and accuracy. Keeping clubs' accounts and bank deposits correctly recorded throughout the year demanded further exactness. Assisting the principal as well as the entire student body, the office staff lubricated the mechanical process of school activities and made Hickory High School a smooth, efficient machine with a human touch.

NUMEROUS TELEPHONE CALLS, tardies and absentees . . . all compose a major portion of the daily procedures efficiently handled by Mrs. Louise Gadd, Mrs. Phyllis Shuford, and Principal B. E. Miller.

Class Rank, Schedule Changes, Student Problems — H.H.S. Guidance

Guidance Department

Schedule changes! For the first few days of school the line of students outside the Guidance Department seemed never to dwindle, only to increase. The number of students requiring changes being greater than usual, the department found the beginning of school rather hectic. As pandemonium faded, counselors finished determining class ranks and began helping pupils examine possibilities for their futures. Administering tests, ranging from SAT to aptitudes, and locating scholarships were added responsibilities. Vocational and educational information contained in books, pamphlets, and films and indications of abilities and interests enabled counselors to provide helpful suggestions and answers for individual students concerning their immediate educational or vocational futures.

HOPES, DREAMS, and fears pass through the minds of rising seniors as Mrs. Havnaer reveals a glimpse of future college careers in preparation for their final year at H.H.S. and for the time after graduation.

New Personnel, Equipment, and Displays Enrich Library Facilities

Library

Headquarters for audio-visual supplies and research material, the library aided students and teachers in classroom studies and special assignments. Growth in research and in teaching departments resulted in a new microfilm reader to provide more convenient research, a pre-viewer for filmstrips to aid students in classwork, and a television camera which enabled students to view the results of their efforts. Substantiated by modern equipment, the library department and its staff rounded out the qualifications needed to complete the atmosphere of learning and progress.

Lunchroom and Maintenance

Appeasing the appetites and retaining clean surroundings for over 1400 students was a challenging job for the sixteen member lunchroom and maintenance staffs. Hot, balanced meals were served to pupils by lunchroom attendants. To insure proper proportions of vital food nutrients, an experienced dietitian planned the meals to be consumed. Providing a wholesome atmosphere for the entire school remained the task of the maintenance personnel. This group carried out their daily routine, which consisted of sweeping all classrooms, waxing the halls, and collecting all used materials, with proficiency. Rendering services vital to the welfare of all students was the job successfully undertaken by these two staffs.

Commercial Department

Speed and efficiency were basics that were aspired through the Business Department. The program C.O.O. and courses typing I and II, bookkeeping I and II, Shorthand I and II, basic business, and data processing provided students means which would prepare them for a suitable job. Accuracy and speed were stressed in the subjects typing, data processing, and shorthand, while cautious addition and subtraction was required in bookkeeping. Basic business gave a combination of skills essential in business. C.O.O. was training and courses in a consolidation, used by pupils to receive monetary rewards and an education at the same time. With the addition of courses over the past years, the fullest potential of the department and its staff kept pace with the business world.

Learning of Home, Health Career—Practical Arts

Practical Arts

Encompassing preparation for home life, job placement, actual work, and health was the fourfold job of the Practical Arts Department. This department consisted of home economics, Distributive Education, Industrial Cooperative Training, industrial arts, and physical education. Dress, design, nutrition, and child care were areas touched in home economics. D.E. and I.C.T. allowed students to go to school half a day and receive on-the-job training the remaining half. Industrial arts gave instruction on woodworking and mechanical drawing. While required, physical education aided sophomores to get into good physical shape through callisthenics and games. All sections of the department influenced not only the future of each individual involved, but enriched his education in his non-academic studies as well.

Comprehension Plus Communication—Keystones of H.H.S. English Courses

English Department

Blending literary works of ancient and modern authors with new concepts on education, the members of H.H.S.'s English Department strove to familiarize numerous aspects of the native language to students. Many techniques of teaching were employed to expose pupils to all the facets of the English language. Varied instruction was made possible by audio-visual aids such as films, recordings, and paintings. To enrich knowledge of grammar and to increase one's vocabulary, courses in speech and composition were given. To benefit pupils the English classes were divided into four different tracts. The tracts, honors, college preparatory, general, and basic, were suited for students with varying capabilities. All this preparation for each student's need plus the proficient teaching staff made this essential area of study provocative.

French IV—A New Dimension to Foreign Studies

Foreign Language

Romantic France, exotic Mexico, and ancient Rome were a combination of places visited on the budget plan tour of Europe offered by the Foreign Language Department. In addition to acquiring fluency in the language, one could learn the culture and history of the land. To provide understanding of the courses, an experimental Spanish class and a new French IV class were offered this year. These additions to the aids already used such as the language lab, tapes, and films, added practical application of newly acquired skills of grammar and pronunciation. Atmosphere played a large part in the program. To achieve the desired effect, teachers used maps, travel posters, objects from the countries in relation to culture, and geography of the land. Therefore students could visualize themselves in a Parisien sidewalk café, a Mexican village, or the Roman Coliseum through language.

Logarithms, antilogarithms, quadratic equations, and exponents were perplexing terms for many pupils. Yet, as the year progressed the awe in geometric figures, numbers, and terms were mere everyday occurrences. The Math Department gave math-oriented students a chance to develop their fullest potential through its various courses. The course provided pupils with a wide choice of related fields, in order to meet the individual's need. As new ideas and methods were forwarded to students through the staff, reciprocals, radicals and ratios, became just a small part of another day's work.

Science Department

Expansion of knowledge in the scientific field touched upon the anatomy of lower creatures, bubbling formulas, and perplexing problems. These areas exemplified the course taught by members of the Science Department staff. Aiming to teach students the basics in a rounded science background, the varied courses of general science, biology, advanced biology, chemistry, advanced chemistry, and physics provided both lower and upperclassmen a challenge. Crayfish and frogs were the center attractions for biology, while formulas and basic chemical properties were discussed in chemistry. The problems of force comprised the physic studies. Essential information on the entire field of science was a job for general science. Many facets made up the Science Department, and all were incorporated to aid man in understanding himself and the world around him.

Fine Arts Department

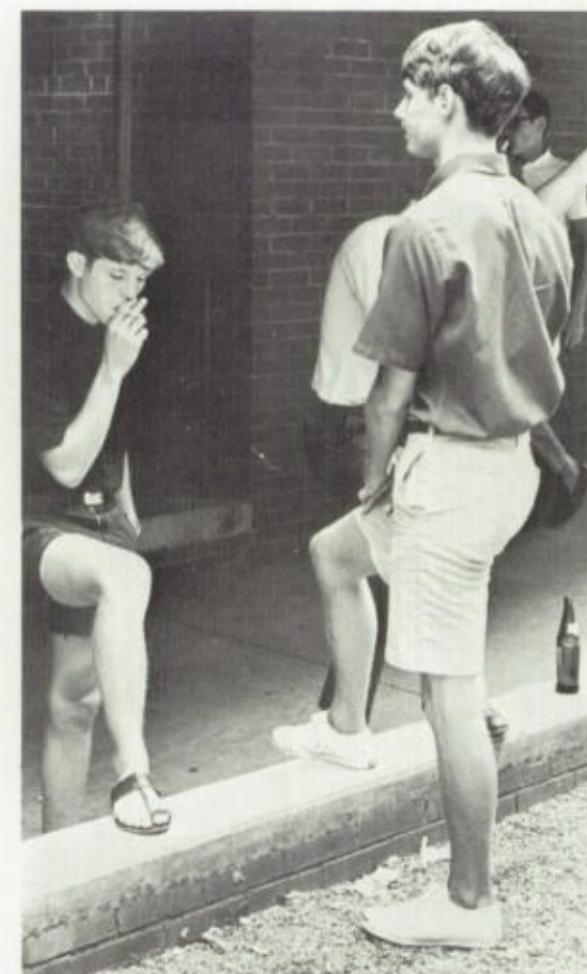

Melodious arrangements, harmonious voices, and the creation of density and rhythm through color were the ingredients comprising the Fine Arts Department. To receive a rounded education students were offered four music courses and two art studies in addition to the academic curriculum. Hidden creative talents were revealed through the hands and voices of students with the help of instruments, music, and paints. To inspire and to arouse the energies of prospective artists was the job of the staff of the Fine Arts Department. The instructors achieved this goal and helped pupils to use their medium as self-expression. In some instances this expression was outstanding enough to receive state-wide recognition in both fields of art. Through orchestration and exhibition of their talents, students found an outlet for their emotions and imagination as well as receiving a background in the arts.

INDIVIDUAL aid is offered to improve musical abilities in a summer school seminar.

Summer School

Invading Hickory High's campus for the summer school program was the job of 261 students during the summer of '69. Along with warmer weather and cooler wearing apparel, the six-week session brought a difference in schedule. Morning breaks and lunch periods divided the five-hour day into equal parts to delete boredom from classes. Biology was chosen by a majority of sophomores in the hopes of making the first year in a new educational environment less difficult, while juniors and seniors strived for extra credits in U.S. History, Geometry, Algebra I and II. Individual assistance in reading and in band instruments were available for those "brushing up" on methods of study and techniques of musical arrangement. Not only could pupils have credit, but also a week's break in courses for the fourth of July, and after summer school, H.H.S. students had a vacation at hand.

Driver's Training

Mixed emotions greeted sophomores as the privilege of a driver's license became closer to being a reality. As a prerequisite to obtaining this responsibility, the course of driver's training, containing thirty hours of classroom study plus six hours of actual driving, was furnished for each student. Reaction to sudden stops, recovery from headlight glare, judgement of distances, and the ability to see in dim light were tested with various devices. These examinations furnished students with an awareness of the diversified qualities necessary for skillful driving. Films also gave variety to the classes in addition to giving examples of possible circumstances with which the prospective driver may be faced. Both driving techniques and laws of the road were stressed in order to develop the desirable characteristics in a driver. The final test was the acquisition of the individual license after hours of practice, study and suffering nervous jitters.

Students Display Abilities Through Excellence In Athletic and Academic Fields

Honors and Awards

Pressing onward to the peak of performance set some, otherwise ordinary H.H.S. students, apart from the rest. Shared by this group were the feelings of satisfaction in their task, dedication to do the job well, and self accomplishment in the work when finished. Through the sacrifice of consecutive days on the athletic field or hours of diligent research, reading and study, the acquisition of a letter or scholarship became a reality. The medium through which these pupils were given a chance to exhibit their talents was the year 1969-70. Among the 1,400 students at Hickory High there were those who ranked nationally in tests, placed in state contests, as well as receiving local recognition for their efforts in both the areas of academics and athletics.

EXCELLENCE IN DEBATING brought a scholarship from the Debating Society of Hickory High for attending Chapel Hill to John Lafferty, Gary Boliek, Charles Case, Steve Terrell, and Lyndon Key.

Varsity Football

The Hickory High Red Tornadoes again held good potential for a successful season with nineteen experienced players returning to the squad's ranks. However, size became a prime question in the team's future performances. With average weight being about one hundred and sixty pounds, the 1969 team was one of the smaller teams in recent years at Hickory. The initial season clash with Gastonia Ashley was seen as a good gauge of Hickory's ability to use quickness and agility to overcome their size disadvantage. The Tornadoes made quick work of the Green Waves and a conference championship trophy seemed within reach. The temporary setback at the hands of West Mecklenburg was quickly overshadowed by a three-game winning romp by the Tornadoes. Unable to mobilize their injury-plagued ground game or their weak passing game, Hickory lost three consecutive games and much of their hope for the championship. Thus, the Tornadoes were faced with the test of regaining spirit and unity and transforming these into wins. The last two victories by Hickory ended their winning season with a 6-4 conference record.

HARD-HITTING 4-A action takes a heavy toll on the players as casualties Mike Bollinger, Mike Collins, and Greg Fitz forego their positions and, instead, follow the game's progress as spectators.

WET FIELDS, slippery balls, and tenacious defenders play havoc with an end's pass reception percentage, but closely-guarded Danny Randle outmaneuvers his man and receives for a first down.

DISTINGUISHING themselves as talented athletes, Chuck Munday and Marvin Everett were chosen to participate in the Shrine Bowl at Charlotte and were also chosen Hickory's Most Valuable Players.

COMMEMORATING Hickory High's outstanding person during the week of the Shrine Bowl, fans of Frank Barger show their admiration by letting all H.H.S. students know that he is "Number One."

Shrine Bowl

The 1969 Shrine Bowl held a particularly high degree of interest for Hickory High. Frank Barger was selected from among all of the coaches of the state to pilot the North Carolina team because of his outstanding past record at H.H.S. In addition, end Chuck Munday and linebacker Marvin Everett were chosen to play on the first string squad of the tarheel team and Billy Hefner was selected to serve as its manager. With practice beginning a week before the game, players began integrating themselves as a team under the direction of Coach Barger. In honor of his efforts, these seven days were declared Frank Barger Week at Hickory High. The lunchroom served "hot franks" and "Bargerques," and signs began appearing across the campus honoring Hickory's number one person of the week. The Saturday afternoon of the game, the majorettes and cheerleaders accompanied fans to Charlotte. At the game, North Carolina came from behind in the dwindling moments of the game to clinch a narrow 21-20 victory. This win broke a tie between the Carolina teams in wins for the entire Shrine Bowl series and put North Carolina back into the lead.

Junior Varsity Football

Spearheaded by a strong defensive unit, the Junior Varsity football team captured the District Six Conference Championships in their second year of 4-A competition. Led and directed by co-captains Michael Robinson and Carson Copeland, with Perry Hodge as alternate co-captain, the Junior Tornadoes racked up a 7-2-1 overall record with a 5-0-1 record in the conference. After winning the first game against Harding, the team went on to meet defeat for the next two games and then remain undefeated for the remaining seven games of the season, finishing up a successful year with a total of one hundred and seventy-eight points scored. Defense played a key factor in the Tornadoes' success as they permitted only seventy-seven points to be scored by the opposition, an average of a little over seven points per contest. Their opponents were held scoreless in over half their games. The end of the season found the strong Hickory Jayvees the only undefeated team in the conference.

Varsity Basketball

An initial five game winning streak gave the varsity basketball team a bright outlook for the 69-70 season. Yet Myers Park quickly precluded any thoughts of an undefeated season by handing Hickory its first defeat. Led by forward Dave Miller, the Tornadoes held a 12-4 overall record and a tie for the conference lead coming into the game with South Mecklenburg. However, big Bobby Jones turned in an extraordinary performance to oust Hickory at Shuford Gymnasium, and put Hickory into second place behind South Mecklenburg. Entering the tournament as third in the conference, H.H.S.'s well-rounded team still held good potential to go far. Towering Charles Lehman was the basis for Hickory's rebounding strength while the bench held substitutes which Coach Mark Lyerly played with little loss in shooting or ball handling. However, Hickory again met their nemesis, South Mecklenburg, in the tournament and went only as far as their third game. Throughout the season the team's high scorer, Dave Miller, also led the conference scoring race with a twenty-four point average. His playing ability earned him the title second best player in North Carolina.

Contributions of Juniors Lift Sluggish Start Into Winning Conference Record

J.V. Basketball

Victimized by a faltering start, the Junior Tornadoes were forced to fight hard to secure a winning conference record. Beginning with their second victory, the J.V. team had a winning record from this point to the end of the season. The year's schedule was initiated with a loss to Olympic followed by a win over West Mecklenburg, which was the result of fine offensive play. After a five game drought, the J.V.'s received aid from several juniors in the ball-handling department. This, coupled with increased teamwork by the team's three strong rebounders, enabled Hickory to score back to back victories over Garinger and West Charlotte. The remaining part of the season was highlighted by another victory over Garinger and a pair of wins over both Hunter Huss and Independence. Through almost the entirety of the year, the squad sought to break past the .500 mark in the win-loss column. A final record of 7-5 was earned, which was sufficient to qualify the Jayvees for third place in the District Six conference standings.

After a valiant effort, the H.H.S. grapplers ended the season with a 2-10 record. The team's only victories were against West Charlotte and St. Stephens. With only four seniors and five juniors, sophomores were the team's mainstay. Co-captains John Brock and Larry Winters placed sixth and fourth in their respective weight classes in the district meet. Exhibition matches were held in the junior highs to encourage the rising sophomores to participate in the wrestling program. Experienced wrestlers were expected to be an important asset to the next year's squad and to give a brighter outlook for the upcoming season to be a winning one.

Tornado Duffers Snare Sixth of Fourteen Teams in 4-A Conference Meet

Golf

With an abundance of seniors comprising the bulk of the team, Hickory's golf squad seemed to present promising possibilities at the beginning of the season. However, due to the lack of organization and a regular practice course, the squad failed to realize its fullest potential. Although they lost to a strong South Mecklenburg team, Hickory's first match resulted in perhaps their most outstanding effort of the year. Hunter Huss became Hickory's nemesis and remained invincible in all the following matches. Throughout the remainder of the season, Hickory captured third or fourth place in competition and finished their season with a very respectable eighth place among the fourteen contending teams in the bi-conference meet.

Tennis

Pre-season practice was practically nonexistent for Hickory High netters: sickness and injuries constantly plagued the top six, keeping substitutes busy most of the regular season. In spite of these obstacles, the Tornadoes, readied by Coach Jack Daughtrey, stepped into a new conference and posted the enviable record of ten and two. These two losses were incurred at the hands of the only two teams to finish ahead of Hickory in conference standings at the end of the season, East Mecklenburg and Myers Park. Outstanding showings at the sectional playoffs by singles players Mike Lafone, Steve Lail, and the doubles team of Carl Starnes and Brad Field placed Hickory immediately behind the perennial power, Myers Park, in point standings and qualified these four to represent H.H.S. at the state tournament.

Hickory Cinderlemen Drop Duel Meets to Speedy, Track

SKY BOUND, D. Sigmon begins his long arc across the pits, striving to set a track record.

Predicting a hard season, Coach Barger began readying the cindermen with March practice sessions. In the season opener, Hickory was defeated by a speedy West Mecklenburg team. The only win of the season came in a grueling four-team meet with Hickory outscoring Olympic for first place. South Mecklenburg took first in the North Invitational Track Meet, while Hickory finished fifth. Dennis Hunter took first place in the 100-yard and the 200-yard dashes. At the Southwestern 4-A Conference Meet in Charlotte, the Tornadoes were paced by Dennis Hunter and James Lowder's placement in their respective divisions. The H.H.S. 880-yard relay team also took a fifth after having a particularly outstanding season. After points were tallied, Hickory placed fifth in the meet and the conference.

After Mid-Season Onslaught Vaults H.H.S. Diamond Force Into First Place Baseball

Coach Washam laments that Lady Luck has seemingly frowned upon Hickory's efforts.

Slugging their way to an enviable nine and three conference record, Hickory High snared the Southwestern 4-A Co-Championship with Garinger. Mr. Troy Washam, the team's newly-acquired coach, had the squad out early in March for pre-season workouts. However, cold weather and intermittent rain hampered these early drills; consequently, this lack of practice resulted in Hickory's dropping their first two season games. As teamwork replaced line-up complications, Hickory then settled down to grind through eleven consecutive victories. With the team's winning streak still seemingly on the upswing, the Tornadoes' momentum was brought to an abrupt standstill by a shut-out defeat at the hands of Independence. Nevertheless, the diamond men reversed the skid by defeating West Charlotte in the season's final game to place themselves in a tie with Garinger. Hickory later lost to Garinger in the conference play-offs and forfeited the right to remain in state-wide competition. Exemplifying the assistance of the underclassman, the recipient of the 1969 Most Valuable Player Award was junior Chuck Munday, who distinguished himself in the field of pitching with a win-loss record of 8-1.

Cheerleaders

Steaming hot chocolate and chilly nights combined with boisterous cheers from enthusiastic students and cheerleaders created the atmosphere of school spirit surrounding the highlights of the sports seasons. Escorting the players on to the field or court at the beginning of games, and ringing in successful campaigns with the "Victory Bell" were employed to intensify school spirit in support of the athletic teams. Exemplifying the good sportsmanship and dedication needed to fulfill their duties, these ambassadors of good will were engaged in many service activities. Utilizing an allotted school period, the cheerleaders improved and developed new techniques through constant practice. They also relinquished many hours of spare time to organize pep rallies, bonfires, and pancake suppers in order to honor outstanding football and basketball players. This unselfish devotion to school produced a winning spirit that followed the Tornadoes throughout the entire sports' year.

TALKING with his hands, Scott Keller completely explains his brainstorm for a project.

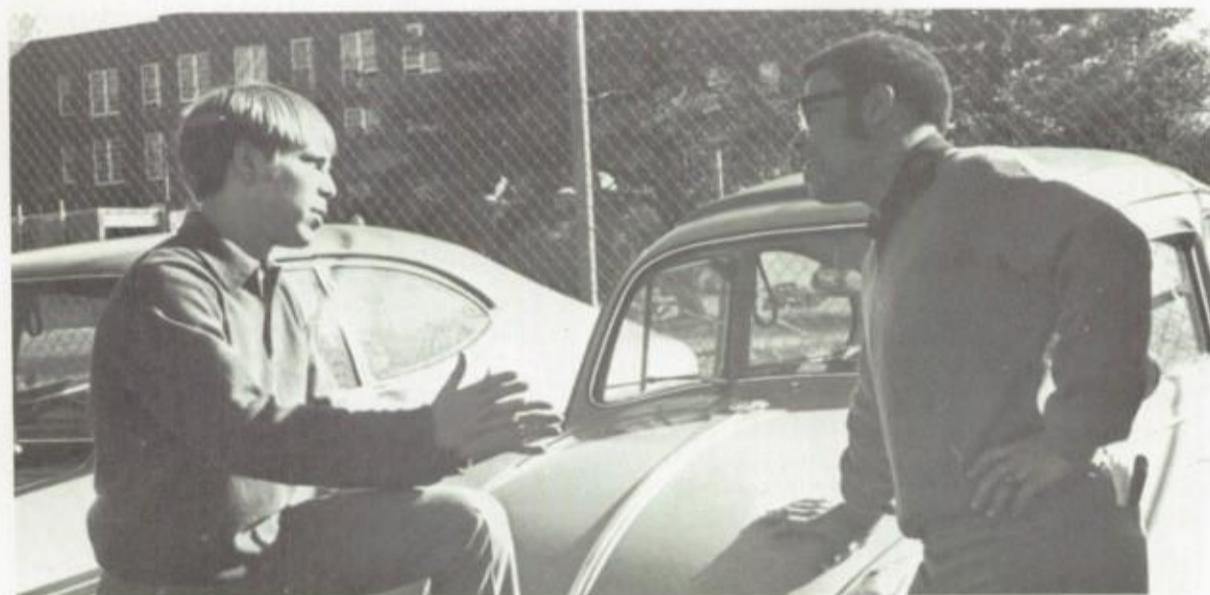

Having high expectations that its new policy of further involving the student body in its affairs would work well, Hickory High's Student Council began planning in the summer its programs for this year. Each class received an additional representative on the Council in its class president. To complete the Homecoming festivities of a beautiful parade and the crowning of a queen, the Council added a dance to this year's events. Several members attended the State Student Council workshop hopeful of finding new solutions to various problems of the Council. Council members also gave out school manuals solving orientation woes for many Sophomores. Dispensing programs at home football games and feeding the varsity team kept most members occupied on Friday nights last fall. Other activities included a club workshop for all of Hickory High's clubs and the annual Talent Show. The Student Council proved to be one of the most valuable assets in keeping the school running smoothly.

Inter-Club

Uniting club and staff heads of Hickory High, the Inter-Club Advisory Council, under guidance of Principal Miller, endeavored to maintain an organized relationship among clubs. The club aided the Student Council in scheduling meetings and class assemblies so as to avoid conflicts. Assisting with Homecoming events and a club workshop, Inter-Club proved an essential communication link between Student Council and other School organizations.

Homeroom Representatives

Hawk-like eyes and shouts of "No breaking" helped stem the tide of lunchline offenders in the Homeroom Representatives' war on lunchline breakers. Their main function of keeping the chain of communication open between the student body and the Student Council was accomplished by inviting any student to attend their meetings and express his opinions and by publishing minutes of each meeting to be given to all homerooms. They also elected a Student of the Month from each class at their meetings. Through these individuals, students were able to give their view on current problems to the Student Council.

Students Guided In the Routine Struggle and Rush to Reach Class on Time As Hall Monitors Succeed in Daily Chore of Creating Order Out of Chaos

Hall Monitors

"Hey you, wrong door!" was a frequent cry of Hickory High's Hall Monitors. Always on the alert for any serious breaking of the rules, these seniors kept hall traffic moving at a constant and steady pace. Helping to keep traffic to the right and preventing running and smoking in the halls and stairwells were the essential duties of these "policemen." A written report of any offender was turned in to the principal's office for proper action. These students helped to make Hickory High safer for everyone.

"WRONG DOOR, SON!" Hall Monitor Kenny Jones explains that left doors are for exits only.

P.T.A. Representatives

Music and a bonfire created the cheerful background for the Parent-Teachers Association's annual Pancake Supper. Conducted mainly by Hickory High's P.T.A. Representatives, the supper helped collect needed money for use by the P.T.A. The Representatives also directed a drive early in the year to encourage parents to become members of the P.T.A. at Hickory High. These elected persons helped better unite the parents, teachers, and students at the high school.

Living Rooms, Sunday Dress, Refreshments Give Dignified Atmosphere to Quill & Scroll Meetings

THIRTEEN becomes a lucky number as a glittering Carol Boyles makes the top twenty-five.

Quill and Scroll Society

Peals of laughter rolled throughout the audience as the Masters of Ceremony cracked a joke during a brief intermission at the 1970 Quill and Scroll Beauty Pageant. Striving to promote good journalism, members used the contest earnings funds earned from the pageant to send staff delegates to the S.I.P.A. convention in Georgia and to hold the yearly Quill and Scroll Banquet. At this banquet, outstanding members of each staff were recognized with awards, and as a climax, a journalism scholarship was given to the most worthy applicant in this field. This year, meetings were held in Quill and Scroll members' houses with Sunday dress required, adding another touch of dignity to the honorary club.

Sudden Downpour of '69 Graduation Tests Dedication of Junior Marshals

OUTSTANDING ACHIEVEMENT in scholastic areas combined with active participation in extra-curricular activities qualify students for membership in the competitive National Honor Society.

National Honor Society

Raindrops, falling on their heads, forced spectators, graduates, and officials to flee for cover during the middle of the 1969 graduation ceremonies. Undaunted by this misfortune, the Marshals stood their ground and helped direct everyone off the field. Members of the Society, from which Junior Marshals are drawn, were chosen at the end of their junior year on the basis of scholastic, athletic, and leadership abilities. Charles Case and Phil Tate were nominated for the National Honor Society Scholarship. All the members were given the privilege of wearing the gold cord, symbolizing their achievement of high academic standards, at graduation.

headaches were caused by difficulties with class pictures and identification cards. However, an All American rating from N.S.P.A., a New York trip plus first place honors at C.S.P.A., and anticipations of S.I.P.A. results and LOG Day helped alleviate some of the pressures. Long hours of tedious work, creative ideas, and a modern, three-column layout helped execute “A Generation Speaks” and make LOG Day a reality for H.H.S.

New Adviser, Printer Give '70 TWIG Its New Look—Additional Pages of Copy, Pictures, Ads

TWIG Staff

Information, entertainment, and influence were the three main aspects of the high school bi-weekly newspaper, the TWIG. Several changes prevailed this year including a new adviser, a new format, and an increase from four pages to six. This additional space allowed room for more editorials, personality sketches, and student opinions in the Letters-to-the-Editor section. During the year, a managing editor was appointed in order to help coordinate the entire paper. Affiliated with many journalistic associations, the paper sent delegates to the S.I.P.A., C.S.P.A., and N.C.P.A. conventions where the paper was judged and suggestions were made. It was chosen as the outstanding paper at S.I.P.A. Funds to finance printing of the paper were provided by the sale of the TWIG to the students and the community and through the sale of advertising space to local business establishments.

RUBBER CEMENT, scissors, and a new light box make the intricate work of TWIG make-up easier for Dwight Ford and Tom Keener as they adhere to the proper journalistic rules for newspaper's layout.

year and included LOG covers, Student Directories, and the LEAVES magazine: a literary publication of prose, poetry, and short stories submitted by students. A chance to become poets and writers was given to interested H.H.S. students by this art, business, literary staff.

Knights, Rooks, Queens Provide Royal War for Advocates of Game of Kings

Chess Club

Contrasting squares of black and white formed the battlefield upon which the "warring armies" of the game of chess met. Intricate strategy was developed in intra-club contests in preparation for tournaments with other schools that would provide the final test of their dexterity. Although developing skill in chess was one purpose of the club, it also provided a relaxing interlude from school pressures and a hobby to be continued later.

Some of the club's members traveled to conventions, including a "Round Robin" debate at Wake Forest, to augment their skill and knowledge of the topic. Several varsity members were awarded scholarships to a Chapel Hill workshop, where they received valuable experience debating championship teams. Candy, Note Card Sales Support Scholarship for Student's Summer Study

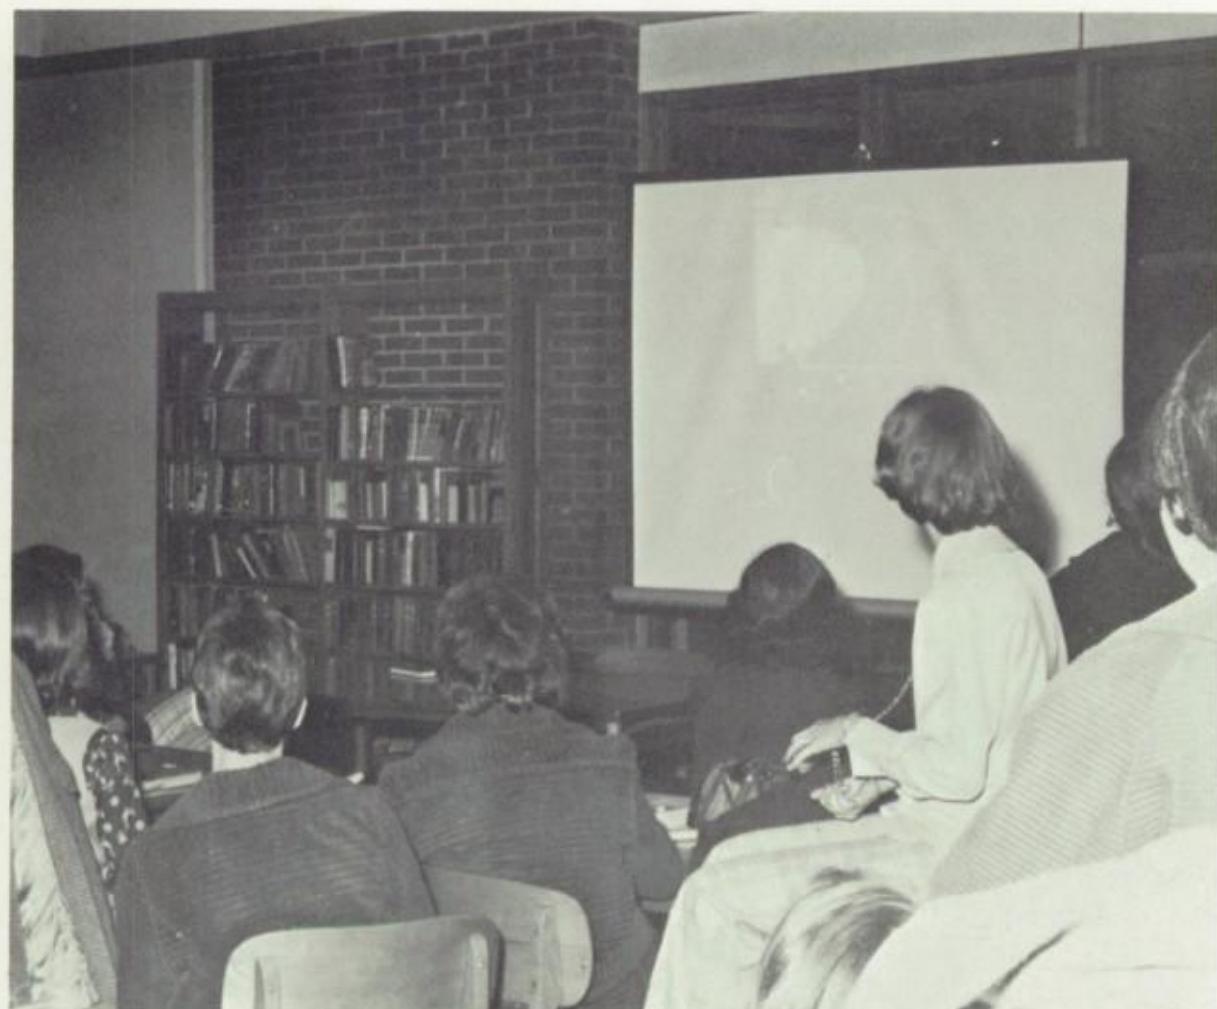

French Club

"Un flambeau, Jeanette, Isabelle," sounded through area neighborhoods as French Club members gave a foreign flavor to the Yuletide spirit. Adding further French culture to Hickory High, they sold note cards, candy, and basketball tickets to support a scholarship this summer and a French exchange student. Sharon Boyles received the scholarship to study at the University of Dijon along with several other students while Lorraine Jung of Toulouse, France helped to give further insight into French life during her stay in Hickory. International Weekend in April was hosted by the French Club in order to acquaint foreign exchange students of the area with each other and Hickory High students.

Trading dollars for pesos, Margaret Bowles, Jimmy Thompson, and Robert Bush crossed the border and spent five weeks of their summer vacation amid fiestas, bullfights, and the atmosphere of the University of Mexico where they studied under Spanish Club scholarships. The awards, raised through candy sales, were given to these students in order to enrich their own knowledge of Spanish culture as well as the club's. Meetings were often highlighted with discussions from the Spanish speaking exchange students in the area, who brought with them the culture of almost every country in South America. Sponsoring a "Miss Ugly" Contest at one of the basketball games, the club provided further funds for its own spring fiesta, complete with tortillas, Spanish chicken and rice, and pinatas.

Adventures into Chemistry Are Initiated by Imaginative Science Fair Entries

ILLUSTRATING one of the uses for his strobe light, Dr. Eugene Edgerton of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology shows a slide of an underwater camera he developed for Jacques Cousteau.

Chemistry Club

Amid beakers, gas jets, and reagents, the Chemistry Club tried to explore as many facets of the subject as possible. In affiliation with the State Science Fair, they promoted various entries to it. The undertaking of these unique projects yielded a modern understanding of the course. The eminent scientist, Dr. Eugene Edgerton, addressed the chemistry classes in February. Though the club's membership dropped, individual involvement helped to pace the club to a prosperous year.

Future Homemakers of America

Well-balanced meals, pins, and patterns led the way to the Future Homemakers of America motto "Toward New Horizons." The club offered girls that were enrolled in a home economics course for the school year a chance to grasp a greater knowledge of home life. Programs presented to the group made apparent the fact that American home life determines the standards of society. The importance of secure homes built on trust and faith for America's future became clear to the girls. Plans to work with county nutritionists in aiding the underprivileged were made as a more extensive study of home life in the community. Making Christmas decorations furthered the homemakers' skill and knowledge.

Jr-Jaycees

Bundled-up stacks of paper lying on the sides of the road became objects of interest to Jr.-Jaycees who worked in coordination with the annual Jaycee paper drive. Other projects of the Jaycees were undertaken with equal zest and enthusiasm by this club. In order to raise funds for their own purposes and promote National Dental Week to area residents, the Jr.-Jaycees decided to beat the "Christmas toothbrush rush" with a pre-Christmas sale of toothbrushes. This new organization hoped to develop the character of young men at Hickory High through closer co-operation with the Jaycees.

Bridging the gap between employer and employee through co-operation and on-the-job training, the members of Vocational Industrial Clubs of America served as a helpful link between the school and the community. Dedicated to the development of leadership in young men and women, V.I.C.A. brought together those students enrolled in Industrial Co-operative Training for activities and contests. Facing stiff competition at all levels, the local club was awarded first place in the category of Business Records at the area judging and second place at the state convention. Capping another active year, the Employer-Employee Banquet was held in late Spring.

"Brag Book," Erasers Appear at H.H.S. as F.B.L.A. Members Raise Funds

"Taking typing? . . . Then you must need a typing eraser." This became a frequent question directed to students by members of the Future Business Leaders of America. The organization sold typing erasers and "Brag Books" which gave them funds to carry out tentative plans. Contest entries, contributions to the Empty Stocking Fund, and attendance of members at district conventions fulfilled their purpose of developing service, education, and progress. Mr. and Miss F.B.L.A. contestants were chosen for their outstanding participation. The achievements of the club were displayed at the State Leadership Conference, where the Hickory chapter won the grand prize for the third consecutive year.

Student Assistants Gain Experience, Aid Teachers With Filing, Paper Work

A RED pen aids Ann Jackson in pinpointing the errors in a group of examination papers.

Future Teachers of America

School-marms-to-be gained considerable insight into the world of teaching as they aided teachers with the mounds of paper-work involved with the profession by serving as assistants during study halls. Filing tests, grading papers, and recording grades broadened their experience and know-how and prepared the students for possible jobs in the future. Becoming especially valuable to teachers during mid-semester and final exams, these assistants were available for any teacher who requested one. Outside of their regular classroom duties, the Future Teachers of America served the Hickory High faculty and students' parents with a tea following an open house commemorating American Education Week, an event, honored by these protegees.

Designed to combine typing, shorthand, filing, and other school-learned skills with their jobs, C.O.O. gave many students the opportunity to gain important work experience while still at Hickory High. The main emphasis of the club was to stress stenographic and clerical skills needed for present and future employment. Many businessmen in the Hickory area were pleased to accept these students in order to benefit their own company as well as giving the girls very valuable commercial training.

Dixie Discussions With Jr.-H.R.C. Disclose Students' Opinions, Suggestions

Red, red robin goes bob, bob, bobbing along . . . Mama Cass unfair to Indians—laughter filled the auditorium as the Junior Human Relations Council presented their program "Laugh-Out '69." The program, a satire on black-white relations, enabled students to "laugh out" many of the incidences at school. Thirty members, an equal number of black and white students, were chosen for the council's job of easing relations between races. Faced with the issue of the playing of "Dixie" at school sponsored activities, the council was asked to find a fair solution. Open discussions with each of the classes were conducted by the council so every individual might have the chance to express their views. To further the understanding of human relations, co-chairmen John Brock and Rick Dula attended the bi-monthly meetings of the Hickory Human Relations Council.

Yuletide Spirit, Expert Salesmanship Assist in Selling of Claxton Fruitcakes

Junior Civitan

Selling cushions in order to save the seats of spectators at home football games and selling fruitcakes in door-to-door nightly excursions, members of the Jr. Civitan Club raised money necessary for their various activities. Each member packed chewing gum, candy, ball point pens, toothbrushes, and other assorted items into a ditty bag to send to Vietnam via the Red Cross and, in November, contributed canned food to give to a needy family as a Thanksgiving dinner. During Christmas, members helped the Salvation Army raise money by ringing bells at booths, downtown and in the Mall. This active group of students contributed to the betterment of the school and the community through its different projects.

“Hey, Hey, Hey, Good-by . . .,” “Soul Team, Sock It To Me, Now”—Football, Basketball Backed By Pep Club At Home Games, Out-of-Town Meets

AROUSING SPIRIT along the parade route, Pep Club members cheer the Tornadoes to victory as their entry in the Homecoming parade, a roomy straw-covered flatbed, proceeds down main street.

Pep Club

“Shout till the echoes ring, for the glory of our team!” Choruses of “Hail to the Varsity” rang through football stadiums and basketball gyms as Pep Club members showed their support of school athletic teams by forming a core of spirit among the H.H.S. rooters. Whether at home or away, the Pep Club was always heard. Using new cheers or old, these students worked at improving school spirit. Realizing the team’s need for support at out-of-town games, the club arranged for bus transportation to matches with other schools. Members also tried to drum up support for wrestling, track, and baseball.

Sophomores orientated into new school life... battle geometric proofs, postulates... driver's training... dissected frogs... school spirit develops at first football game... Dickens — topic for English themes, speeches... newness slowly fades.

Juniors challenged with greater responsibilities... tackle College Boards and Merit tests... burnt grounds identified with cigarette smokers... class rings... research papers and note cards — time consuming projects... final year approaches.

Seniors anticipate future as graduation nears... man walks on the moon... college acceptances acknowledged... 40 degree weather — bell-bottoms, saddle oxfords... Temptations... senior week arrives... flipping of tassels signifies new beginning... classes.

CLASSES

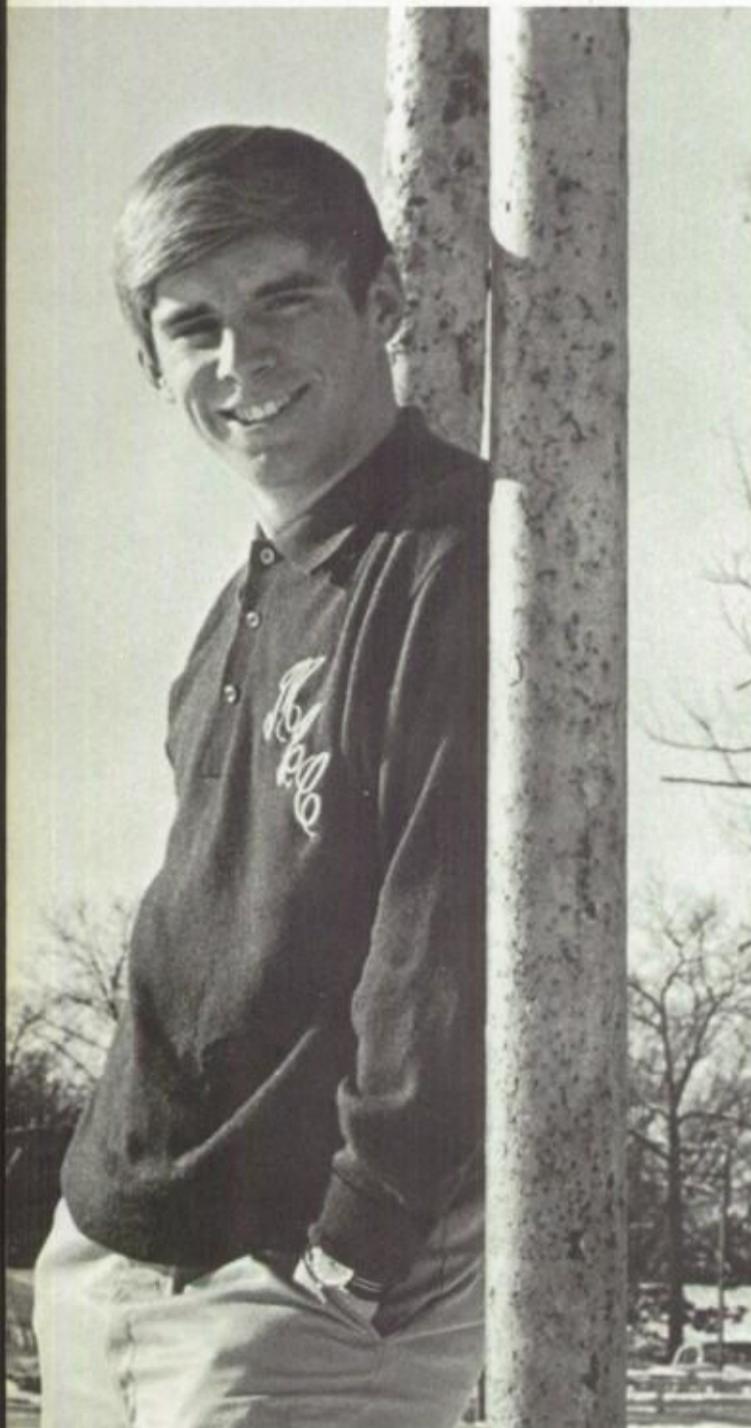

The Senior Class

Had it really come true? Seniors—the student title that had long been anticipated and worked and studied for had finally become a reality. Participation in sports, clubs, community projects, and other extracurricular activities helped to balance the hard work and study of school life.

It was a memorable year for seniors. One in which man, after years of preparation and preliminary space flights, actually landed and walked on the moon. The decision of to use or not to use "Dixie" as a school pep song became one of the many controversial issues encountered during the senior school year.

Their most desired ambition was that, during the school year, through their conduct and achievements, they would have gained the respect of their underclassmen and the admiration of the faculty and school staff. With the ending of exams, upperclassmen turned their thoughts to the arrival of senior week and graduation. Though it marked the end of one phase of life, it was also the beginning of a new phase, be it college or whatever endeavor chosen. Seniors were faced with the responsibilities of a community, a nation, and a world launching upon a new decade filled with many problems as well as wonderful opportunities.

The Junior Class

Serving as the median of the student body, Juniors entered into their second year of high school life. Accustomed to the mounting piles of books and the crowded hallways, they adjusted more readily to the daily routine of changing classes. Trips to the beach became a part of the past as students buckled down to the seriousness of studies.

With the taking of Merit Tests and College Boards, Juniors became aware of the importance of planning for their future career. Newly licensed drivers acquired the right to the car and permission to park in the grove. The election of Junior Marshals and the hosting of the Junior-Senior Prom climaxed their year.

As Juniors began taking on more responsibilities, they realized the importance of striving for excellence in all fields. The talents of the Junior Class were exhibited when their float placed as second runner-up in the Homecoming float competition. Greater participation in clubs, staffs, and sports helped to broaden their knowledge as they approached their final school year and the position of leadership that they would inherit as Seniors, the upperclassman of Hickory High.

School Handbooks Provide Aid in Acquainting Students With New Schedules

SURRENDERING SUMMER leisure, Juniors Candy Rhyne and Linda Guy assemble school handbooks which are to aid and direct the entire student body through the first few weeks of school life.

ADDING THE final step of completion, Bill Sitton carefully staples each of the handbooks.

WORKING diligently, Juniors make use of late hours in order to reach the float deadline.

DRAGONS, knights, and maidens depict the medieval setting of Camelot for the class float.

Elimination of Activity Period—Pep Rallies, Elections Are Held Before School

MORNING pep rallies, open for the entire student body to encourage participation at football games, create a feeling of unity and school spirit among the Sophomores, Juniors, and Seniors.

CANDIDATES are presented to the Junior Class for the election of H.H.S.'s Homecoming Queen.

BEATS of "Hail to the Varsity" from the band encourage Hickory High School fans to make use of a time-out to cheer the Red Tornadoes on to victory in the first home game of the season. A rhythmic swishing of shakers, in the school colors, assures the team of student support.

DIRTY HANDS AND SCRATCHED FINGERS result from the Saturday morning task of raking leaves and cleaning yards as indicated by DeMolay members Phil Whitworth and Raymond von Drehle.

The Sophomore Class

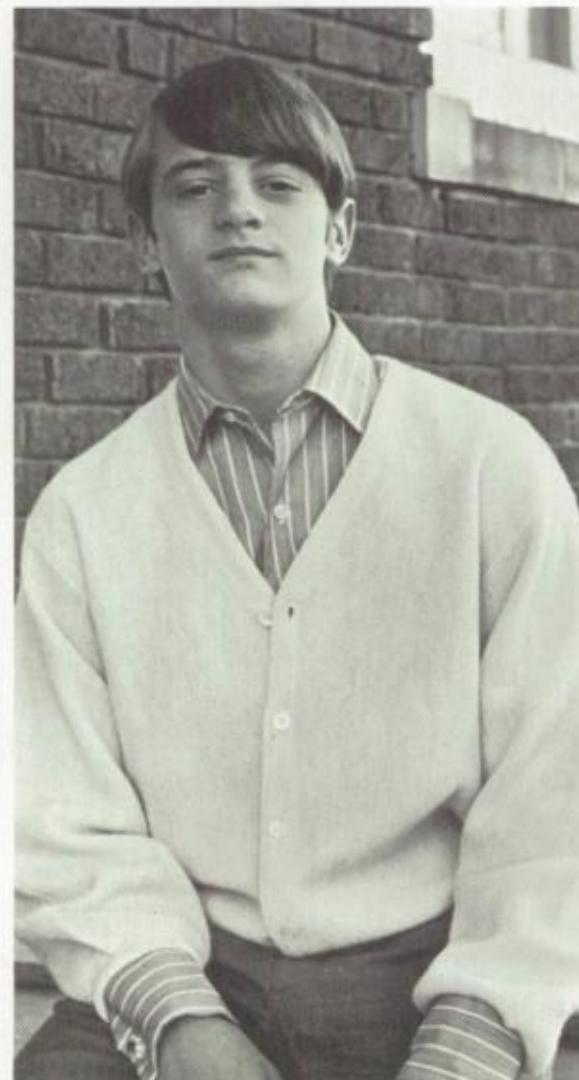

Jammed hallways, confusing directions, and changing classes became the pattern for newly orientated students. Help from fellow students was greatly needed. After the first days of confusion, sophomores began adapting to a new concept of school life.

Acquiring the name Tornadoes and a home at Hickory High was part of the change experienced by the Sophomore Class. The transition was also composed of getting acquainted with admit slips and computerized report cards. Experience in constructing a float, the excitement of Homecoming, and the dread of the first exams gave them a beginning in the complete high school curriculum.

The move to high school unfolded a new scope of activities which permitted underclassmen to become a part of student life at Hickory High. This scope contained Friday night ball games, morning club meetings, and long hours of studying. Gradually new experiences faded into daily routine as students became accustomed to their new school. Striving to obtain recognition, members of the Sophomore Class blended into the working student body of Hickory High.

Reddy To Rock

Reddy Kilowatt never misses a party. In fact, without him, things would be pretty dull. Think of it: no stereos, televisions, electric guitars or ice cubes.

Thanks to Reddy there are over 160 flameless electric servants that make modern living comfortable, economical and fun. When you have a home of your own, there will probably be even more.

Pat,

Knowing you through Richard led me to have a good friend in you. I enjoyed just messing around and telling jokes. The real fun comes from J.C. He is the coolest of anyone person I know. I hope to see you over there a lot this summer so just keep it cool.

Editor's Last Word

Shouting voices reverberate through valleys as echoes. Similarly, student ideas about morals, poverty, war, peace, love, hate, religion, government, tolerance, and prejudice echo loudly through H.H.S. As ideas evolve, desire for outlets of expression reach a compelling force, thus high school becomes a sounding board for ideas of youth. Tottering on the step below adulthood, young people want to project their thoughts about adult subjects.

This generation is struggling, but is succeeding in speaking its mind. It has been accused of being overly idealistic and too hasty in forming opinions. Perhaps this may be so, however, many facets of this complex world that merit examination might be sidestepped if youth did not speak out. Idealism stimulates change, and without change the world can not possibly keep progressing.

More than any previous generation, this one has gained the courage to speak. Adults should not be so quick to criticize, because at least youth today is thinking. It is this ability to ponder, reason, and be willing to try something new that can better society. Thus, the present generation faces a challenge, a challenge to continue speaking, to utilize its ideas, and to encourage the rest of youth to follow its example, for in youth lies the power to change the world.
